REPEAT

The dance tells the story of a bullfight. The Toreador enters the arena and waits for the bull. The bull enters and the Toreador parries to and fro, encouraging the bull to charge. The Toreador holds the cape to the bull calling El Toro (the dancer can call "El Toro" at this point is they feel comfortable with this). The bull charges and the Toreador swings the cape back in front of the bull as he passes. The Toreador twirls away to the side in a victory dance as the bull recovers. The Toreador dances toward the bull clicking his heels and tempting the bull to charge again. The bull looks-and the Toreador turns his back on the bull in disdain-thrilling the crowd, before turning once more to face the bull and repeat the performance. As a competition dance, this story goes on to a finale with the Toreador killing the bull on the last beat of the dance.
